

Why do some children struggle with making friends?

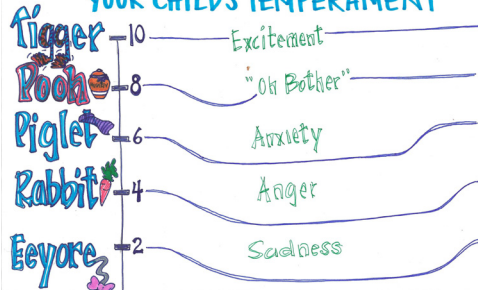

How does the “social butterfly” seem to make and keep friends so effortlessly?

Why do some children struggle to keep friends due to behavioral or emotional outbursts?

Will You Be My Friend?

By Craig A. Knippenberg has the answers.

HOLDING ONTO HAPPINESS; YOUR CHILD'S TEMPERAMENT

Will You Be My Friend?

Understanding Your Child's Social Brain is a fun, easy way to recognize how your child controls impulses, handles emotions and reads the social cues of others. Plenty of fun stories and tips for parents on how to increase your child's social functioning.

It's so simple, you will be able to explain it to your children!

View Craig's promotional videos on YouTube:

"Will You Be My Friend? Segment I, II, III, IV, V" and on AdventureDad.org or craigknippenberg.com

Craig Knippenberg, LCSW, M.Div.

Craig is child therapist from Denver, Colo. with 32 years of experience teaching adolescents about their brains and the social interactions of life. He is a consultant for St. Anne's Episcopal School where he has developed a curriculum to teach students from kindergarten to eighth grade. He is the founder of AdventureDad.org, a website dedicated to helping dads connect with their kids through adventure.

